

MARRIAGE EXERCISE #4 - COMMON GROUND

STUDYING YOUR WIFE

Rationale

We all want to be loved, but especially our wives and especially by us. Our wives love it when we get interested in the same stuff they are. But many of us know little about our wives. If you've been married for a while . . . if you work a lot and she 'does the kids thing,' you may be surprised by how little you know about your wife. Change that. Become a student of this person you're spending the rest of your life with.

Challenge Assignment

Take the true-false self-test provided below. Be honest in your answers . . . this isn't a competition.

Now add up the T's and F's. While this isn't perfect, it's a 'blink' into the quality of your marriage.

10 or more T's - You know your wife pretty well.

Less than 10 T's - You need to make some changes. You need to draw closer to your wife, get to know her better, and take time to continually study her. We all want to be known and understood.

Over the next thirty days, spend time learning the answers to the questions you missed on the quiz. In addition, make it a point to learn at least one new thing about your wife every day . . . something you didn't know or didn't pay attention to before. Goes without saying these are to be positive, not negative things you're looking for and learning. Attempt to come to the group with the thirty things you learned.

Debrief

Share with the group your results from the 20-question quiz as well as the three most surprising things you learned in studying your wife this month. Each man will follow suit. Set the ground rules so no one crosses the line of impropriety or disrespect for privacy. Have a conversation about the value of continually studying your wife.
